CARDINALS OPEN PAPAL ELECTION

By FRANK GERVASI

VATICAN CITY, March 1 (INS)—The sacred task of choosing, by prayer and meditation and secret ballot, the 261st successor of St. Peter as Vicar of Christ on earth began today when the College of Cardinals was immured in the Vatican until such a time as it has made its historic choice.

At 5:30 p. m. (11:30 a. m. E.S.T.), the only unsealed door leading into that portion of the Vatican set aside for the conclave was swung closed and locked from the outside and then from the inside.

To William Cardinal O'Connell of Boston fell the honor of formally "locking in" the sacred conclave.

Last of the 62 cardinals to arcanonical law to enable American hierarchy, whose vigorous protest in 1922 caused radical changes in cannonical law to enable American participation in papal elections, was last to glimpse the outside world as the heavy door of the Cortile di San Damaso swung shut.

DOORS ARE BOLTED

Fulfilling a function that has been the prerogative of his noble family for centuries, Prince Ludovico Chigi Della Rovere-Albani, hereditary marshal of the conclave, closed the door and locked it on the outside with three keys.

One of these he gave to the governor of Vatican City, Marquis Ferrocini, and the other two remained in his own keeping, securely locked away in a red velvet purse suspended from the belt of his mediaeval costume.

Meanwhile, Cardinal O'Connell, his path lighted by torch-bearers, had led a procession of cardinals through the Vatican corridors to the doorway. There, amid impressive ceremony, he threw the great

Cardinal O'Connell In Vatican After Final Auto Dash

(Special Dispatch to the Boston Evening American)

VATICAN CITY, March 1—William Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, arrived here today to join other Princes of the Church in choosing a new Pope.

Debarking at Naples from the S. S. Neptunia, Cardinal O'Connell was brought to Rome by automobile.

He made a stop at a hotel in Rome to change into fresh attire before coming to the Vatican.

United States Ambassador William Phillips, who was lunching at the hotel, sent a note of greeting to the Cardinal's room and expressed a wish to see him after the conclave.

Two South American cardinals, Leme of Rio de Janeiro and Copello of Buenos Aires, debarked from the Neptunia with Cardinal O'Connell.

They, however, came to Vatican City by special train.

IN GOOD SPIRITS

Apparently in good spirits on his ship's arrival at Naples, Cardinal O'Connell told International News Service:

"I am feeling fine."

He was assisted down the gangplank by two ship's officers.

Upon reaching shore, Cardinal O'Connell leaned heavily on his cane. Although he protested he felt well, it seemed obvious that the trip across the ocean had fatigued him.

He was met by Monsignor Hurley, representing the Vatican State Department, and by an aide of the American consul.

Because of the nature of his visit, the prelate refused to even take time out for rest and elected to continue on the last 145-mile lap to Rome at once.

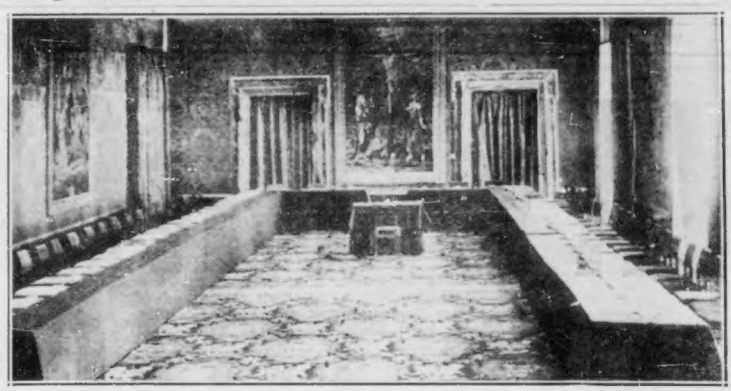
Italian officials led the way on the trip to Naples, determined that there should be no repetition of his visits in 1914 and 1922, when he arrived too late for papal balloting.

It was learned that Cardinal O'Connell had asked Cardinal Pacelli that Dr. John G. Downing be admitted to the conclave to stay with him as a companion. Downing is a skin specialist. He is the husband of Cardinal O'Connell's niece.

The application probably will not be acted upon until late today or tomorrow. If the decision should be favorable, the conclave doors then would have to be unsealed to admit Dr. Downing.

Cardinal O'Connell was accompanied into the conclave chambers by Msgr. Minihan.

Remaining with Dr. Downing outside the walls was the Cardinal's nephew, Judge Paul Kirk of Boston.



CONCLAVE—In this majestic room the world's 62 Roman Catholic cardinals were to gather today prior to choosing a successor to the late Pope Pius XI. Before each cardinal's chair is placed paper and writing material, with which he makes known his choice. Balloting may start tomorrow.

4 Mothers Among 5 Women Held on Shoplifting Charges

Captured in a police drive against an alleged shoplifting ring, operating in small communities throughout eastern Massachusetts, five Greater Boston women, four of them mothers, were charged with larceny in Dedham district court today.

They were held in $500 each for trial March 15.

Police said the five were arrested in Norwood, after two clothing stores there had been looted.

On the persons of the women, when searched, police matrons allegedly found many stolen articles.

Other loot, to the value of several hundred dollars, was found in an automobile, parked near one of the "raided" stores.

The women held are Mrs. Dorothy Harrington, 27, mother of five, of Harlow street, Roslindale; Mrs. Bessie Bullard, 25, mother of three, of Woodbury street, Roxbury; Mrs. Vera Sprague, 33, mother of two, of Kilmaroneck street, Boston; Mrs. Helen Hawkins, 24, mother of one, of Merrimack street, Methuen; and Miss Ruth Chapski, 32, of Beach street, Roslindale.

Chamber Opposes New Holidays Here

The Boston Chamber of Commerce today placed itself on record as opposed to the establishment of any new holidays affecting the operation of business which are not generally observed in the majority of other states.

LOOT UNCOVERED—Arrest of five women in Norwood and recovery of several hundred dollars in loot today started police investigation of alleged shoplifting ring. Five-Way Probe Launched In Runaway Trolley Crash

With the toll six dead and 27 injured, a five-way probe was launched today into the runaway trolley car crash yesterday in Roxbury.

DAYLIGHT PHOTO SHOWS HOW CAR WAS WRECKED BY CRASH

One investigation was being conducted by the Boston Elevated itself.

A second by the State Department of Public Utilities.

The city council's committee on public safety took steps toward a third.

The fourth was in the hands of police, who have charged the trolley operator, technically, with manslaughter.

The fifth called for a special legislative investigation and was asked in a resolve filed with the legislature by Representatives Morris Kritzman and Harry Kalus.

They also demanded a complete traffic survey of Seaver street and Blue Hill avenue, scene of the accident, by the Metropolitan District Commission, the Department of Public Works and the City of Boston Traffic Commission.

The accident, worst since a jammed Elevated trolley dived into Fort Point Channel on presidential election night in 1916, was tentatively blamed on a broken valve spring in the air brake mechanism.

According to General Manager Edward Dana of the Elevated, the mechanical defect rendered the air brake useless, allowing the big trolley to gather momentum.

William H. Kirley, director of railway and railroad lines for the Department of Public Utilities, personally visited the tragedy scene at Blue Hill avenue and Seaver street.

$7450 Theft From Dad's Firm Charged to Dorchester Girl

Charged with the larceny of $7450 from her father's bankrupt firm, Miss Ursula Weisman, 28, of Baird street, Dorchester, was arrested at her home today.

In municipal court she pleaded not guilty before Judge Joseph Zottoli. She was released on bail of $1000 for trial March 15.

Miss Weisman, daughter of Harry Weisman of the firm of Slater & Weisman, coat manufacturers with offices on Kneeland street, South End, was a bookkeeper for the firm until it went into bankruptcy recently.

Inspectors Joseph Desmond and James McDevitt of the Boston police said the warrant charged the girl with 41 counts of fault withdrawals by raising the amount of authorized withdrawals.

Police said Miss Weisman went to New York city for a few weeks after her father's firm went into bankruptcy and that an examination by auditors revealed the alleged larcenies. The 41 alleged larcenies have occurred during the past two years, police said.

Two Killed as Trolley Runs Amok

BLAST, FIRE RUIN CUTTER; 3 HURT

Explosion and fire wrecked a 65-foot Coast Guard patrol boat today, as she was taking aboard gasoline at the Standard Oil docks, East Boston.

Three crew members, trapped below decks, narrowly missed death. All three were injured, two severely.

The force of the explosion smashed down bulkheads, splintered the whole interior of the boat and hurled the victims headlong.

They were rescued by a fellow crew member and a Standard Oil Company employe, who had been on deck at the time of the explosion.

Those injured were Boatswain's Mate Fred Knoeckel, Machinist's Mate George Snyder and Boatswain's Mate Charles A. O'Reilly.

O'Reilly, half-stunned and badly shaken, was treated at the Standard Oil dock.

FLAMES SWEEP BOAT

Gasoline flames, ignited by the explosion, swept the Coast Guard craft, the AB-59, from stem to stern a few seconds after the injured men were helped to safety.

The blaze was fought by the Fireboat Angus J. MacDonald from the South Ferry and by the East Boston fire department, assisted by a special crew from the Standard Oil Company plant.

When the flames were finally extinguished, the boat appeared to be a total loss, her interior gutted and her hull burned and charred almost to the water's edge.

TELLS OF BLAST

Boatswain's Mate O'Reilly told the Boston Evening American a first hand story of the accident. He said

"We were taking gasoline from a tank truck which had been run out on the dock.

"Knoeckels, Snyder and I were below decks watching the guages and keeping an eye on the connections between the gasoline line fromthetruck and our tanks. [illegible] we knew, there was a terrific crash and we were picking ourselves out of the wreckage.

"I was knocked end over end up against a bulkhead.

"Bosun's Mate Walter Booth and a civilian, who were up topside, came running down to give us a lift. The fire was spreading fast. We got out of that place just in time."

Story of Pygmalion

". . . And so he dreamed a dream, this Pygmalion, the sculptor, and he got up from his couch, and there was a block of marble of wondrous whiteness . . .

"The hours passed and little by little the marble took shape under the sharp edge of his chisel, and he knew that truly this was the most beautiful thing he ever had done . . . Luscious limbs of exquisite contour shaped themselves, and now a torso grew in subtle curves, so soft, so lovely . . . And a face, heaven-born, seemed to smile at him, although he knew it was of marble.

"At last it was done and it was so beautiful that it started tears in his eyes, and an ache in his throat, and he knelt down in his studio and clasped the cold limbs in his arms and prayed . . . 'Oh, Zeus, give life to this beautiful thing I have wrought'—and as he prayed it seemed that a warm flush spread through the chill veins, and finally it moved and spoke . . . Such was the gift of the Gods to Pygmalion, the sculptor, long, long ago . . .

"And he called her Galatea . . ."

—From "Pygmalion and Galatea," an ancient Greek tale.

By GEORGE W. CLARKE

Copyright, 1939, by the Boston Evening American

France and England had just recognized Franco . . . Cardinal O'Connell, hurrying to Rome, was only one day from his goal . . . The President had demanded that A. F. of L. and the CIO compose their difficulties . . . And outside the window of the local room a crew of workers were swinging a great crane high into the air to take down stones placed at the top of a building 80 years ago.

There was the usual chatter and hum. Lights flashed and buzzers sounded at the City Desk. Someone was speaking too loudly over in the Sports Department, and over all, was the incessant commanding, demanding sound of the news machines, grinding out copy from all over the world.

Then there was a little man there, black-eyed, bird-like. He was speaking:

"This fellow Shaw—George Bernard Shaw, an Irishman—wrote a play, see. And they called it 'Pygmalion.' It's all about what happens when some English dudes get talking over some highballs and one of them says he can turn any girl into a duchess in 90 days.

"Give him the girl, he says, and he can teach her how to walk, talk, dress, how to be somebody—all in 90 days.

"And he does it, see. He gets a flower girl from in front of a theater and in no time at all she's a great lady, and——"

"Well, that's the stunt, see. We dress her up, and——"

SO GALATEA LIVED

Pygmalion and Galatea . . . and the editor dared to dream for a little while. The love-mad sculptor in his studio long ago. The marble and the loveliness he fashioned from it. The prayer to the gods and their answer. So, Galatea lived. And a question rang itself to him. How many Pygmalions have lived in the world? How many countless thousands have sought to fashion their own loved one out of such material as was there? How many—

And then he thought of a sardonic old man, with a bristling pink beard, arched eye-brows, and locks of hair like devil's horns. And he thought of bitter truths coming from the old man's lips, but so phrased that they sounded like ribald buffoonery. And he thought that back of it all that old, keen mind, and that great heart which

Hub Spending 'Seriously' High

With an over-all property valuation decline of $421,740,700, or 22 per cent, since 1930, Boston's expenditures are now "seriously out of line," according to a report made public today by the Municipal Research Bureau.

The report asserted that debt service charges, to meet the overhead on temporary borrowings, cost Boston $7.93 of the $41.30 collected in taxes on each $1000 worth of property.

A large proportion of the temporary borrowings are made necessary by increasingly large tax delinquencies, according to the report.

Cited were figures for 1929 when all but $5,416,245 of the total levy was collected, as compared to 1938, when $14,288,239 went uncollected.

M'GLUE INDICTED IN U. S. TAX PROBE

Attorney Charles H. McGlue, former chairman of the Democratic State Committee and of the State Ballot Law Commission, and former political adviser to ex-Governor Curley, was indicted today by the federal grand jury in connection with tax evasion cases now being presented to that body.

A Boston lawyer, long prominent in Massachusetts politics, was first target of government prosecutors today as they went before a special session of the federal grand jury here seeking indictment of more than 100 alleged evaders of the federal income tax.

Early witnesses called included Timothy D. Crowin, chief of the income division of the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau here, and Charles J. Sommers of Belmont, vice-president of the Harvard Trust Company of Cambridge.

Among persons against whom indictments are to be sought are prominent Massachusetts contractors, politicians, lawyers, businessmen and sportsmen, the Boston Evening American learned.

In charge of the Boston drive to bring "big shot" income tax dodgers to book is Assistant United States Attorney Henry M. Leen.

Assisting him is United States Attorney Lee Looney, sent here from Washington by order of Attorney General Frank Murphy.

Attorney-General Murphy ordered the "clean up" of income tax evasion cases, allegedly revealed by activities of federal investigators here during the past two years.

The so-called U. S. Treasury Department "wrecking crew," which uncovered amazing evidence in Massachusetts and other sections of New England, was headed by Special Investigator Clifton Mack.

Hitler Fears End, Grows Hysterical At Any Nazi Delay

Chancellor Hitler of Germany believes that his career as Nazi dictator is drawing toward an early end, Karl H. Von Wiegand, dean of American war correspondents, reports in Cosmopolitan magazine for April, published today.

Von Wiegand, who is now in Europe and who has known Hitler intimately since 1921, writes:

"Der Fuehrer today is haunted by a premonition that his end is not far distant — perhaps six months, perhaps a year. He may, he feels, rule autocratically and dictatorially two years. Already he is living in a retreat—"Adlerhorst" (eagle's nest) — which many believe is his self-designed mausoleum."

FUEHRER'S OBSESSION

Von Wiegand says Hitler told him years ago that he was aware he would not live to be old.

"Now he speaks of it openly in private conversations," the correspondent continues.

"'My time is now short and I still have so much to do,' is a plaint that has become familiar to his entourage. It is becoming an obsession with Der Fuehrer."

Von Wiegand quotes Andre Francois-Poncet, until recently French ambassador to Germany and the diplomat who got on best with the chancellor, as saying:

"Hitler is telling everyone around him that 'Meine zeit ist nun kurtz' ('My time is now short') and the end of his mission in the world is nearing."

Von Wiegand, who knew Hitler well before he rose to power and has had almost countless interviews and private conversations with him since, continues:

CONSUMED BY OWN FIRE

"Hitler is a veritable human meteor streaking the dark political skies of Europe—an ill omen to millions, a sign to other millions. Like a meteor which has suddenly appeared out of nowhere, he is being consumed by fires of his own being.

"Those self-devouring flames are his personal ambition to be the greatest German who ever lived; his unbelievably deep hatred for the Jews; his incredible vindictiveness toward enemy or opponent, personal or national; and, finally, his insatiable greed for ruthless power."

From Hitler's official family, Von Wiegand reports, trickle reports that because of his premonition that the end is near he is now consumed by a fever of haste. Delay in carrying out his orders result in hysterical outbursts of impatience.

"This," Von Wiegand says, "is believed to have its roots chiefly in the psychosis of his premonitions that he will not have the necessary time to consummate his grandiose political plans."

HEAD NAZIS DON'T FLY

As another indication of Hitler's obsession of approaching fate, Von Wiegand cites the fact that, although the Fuehrer used to travel everywhere in Germany by plane, he no longer flies.

And he has given orders that Field Marshal Goering the air minister, and all other key officials, must stay on the ground. As explanation of this policy Von Wiegand quotes Hitler as saying:

"An accident shall not come to the aid of enemies of Germany."

Radcliffe Girls' Boy Friend Routs Cambridge Prowler

War on night prowlers was opened today by Cambridge police following the latest report of an attempted house entrance last night.

This was at the apartment occupied by Miss Elena Zarudnaya, 22, Phi Beta Kappa girl at Radcliffe.

She reported to Police Chief Timothy F. Leahy that while she, male friend and her two sisters were having a late supper in the apartment, a prowler attempted to enter one of the rear windows.

Her boy friend, said Miss Zarudnaya, rushed out of the house and gave chase, but lost the prowler in the darkness.

Chief Leahy has received numerous reports of prowlers in that neighborhood and will assign plainclothes men to the area, he said today.

Dishwater Beats Bandit In Beverly

It was dishwater against gun—and the dishwater won!

All hot and soapy, it was hurled straight in the face of a Beverly holdup man. He toppled over, grasping for breath and clawing at his eyes.

Heroine of the occasion was Mrs. Charles Young, wife of the proprietor of an ice cream and candy store in Cabot street, Beverly.

She went into action after the holdup man, brandishing a revolver, had knocked down her crippled and elderly husband.

Police, attracted by Mrs. Young's screams, arrived in time to capture a bedraggled youth before he could recover from the dishwater drenching.

Identified in Salem district court today as William A. (alias Ernest) Lawnsby, 22, of Bennett street, Beverly, he was held in $5000.

Two weeks ago Maxine wrote the First Lady, asking if some critics were right in denouncing her for singing old-time songs in a jazzier tempo.

She said she received the following reply on White House stationery, with Mrs. Roosevelt's signature:

"I can't imagine what the songs you mention would be like put to swing time, but there is nothing wrong in your doing it.

"If people like it and you succeed, you will soon be doing other things. You cannot please everyone all the time."

Proponents of the measure cited the unsolved slayings of Louis Gaeta, Revere gambling king, and David "Beano" Breen, Boston night club operator, as reasons for such a probe.

Boy, Trapped In Lift, Jokes During Rescue

His foot caught between an elevator and a floor, in a Bosworth street building, Albert Hanlon, 21, of Lexington street, East Boston, smoked cigarettes and joked today as firemen worked an hour to free him.

According to police, Hanlon, who operates the elevator, turned to talk to a passenger as the car passed from the first to the second floor. In some manner his foot became entrapped.

Firemen inserted an "elevator rat" into the well and pried the cage over far enough to free the boy's foot.

At City Hospital, Hanlon was found to have suffered a possible fracture of the left leg.

Couple Slain, Girl Of 12 Attacked

EDINBURG, Ind., March 1 (AP)—A mysterious intruder slew Mr. and Mrs. Paul Brand and attacked their 12-year-old daughter, Johnson County officers found today upon being called to the family's home north of here after the child, hysterical, had run to a neighbor's to give the alarm.

The sobbing girl, one of the children, said she had lain terrified in bed with her brother and sister, ages five and six, respectively, for several hours before reporting the crime, which, she said, occurred shortly after midnight.

Police found Mr. and Mrs. Brand dead in bed. Mrs. Brand had been shot with a .22 caliber bullet. Officials said the cause of Brand's death had not been determined.

State police broadcast a description of the Brands' missing automobile in which the slayer was believed to have made his escape.

Police said the attack victim told them she was sleeping with the other Brand children in a room adjoining their parents' bedroom when she was awakened by a loud noise and then some scratching.

Suddenly, the officers said she told them, everything was quiet again and a man came into her room and grabbed her.

Women Topple Tipsy Trailer

LOWELL, March 1 (AP)—Edward A. McEvoy, 45, fined $10 in district court today for drunkenness, knows what it is to be outnumbered by women.

Patrolman James W. Murphy testified that when he arrived in response to a call, he saw McEvoy on the ground, three women sitting on him and two others standing guard.

The women, Murphy continued, declared McEvoy had been following them. When he slipped and fell, three women pounced upon him. The others called police.

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach often pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and up at all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in no time and get you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for indigestion.

NEW POPE WILL BE POWERFUL PEACE FACTOR

Cardinals Open Vatican Conclave

As the conclave of the Sacred College of Cardinals met to choose a successor to the late Pope Pius, Hugh Walpole, celebrated novelist, has written the following illuminating analysis of the enormously important implications of the conclave's choice.

By HUGH WALPOLE

World Copyright, 1939, by International News Service

VATICAN CITY, March 1 (INS)—In spite of many great events in the world that are now approaching a climax, it may safely be asserted that the election of a new Pope which will be settled by the conclave of cardinals which opened today, will be one of the most tremendous in its effect on world history.

It has not always been so. Many elections in the past have been concerned almost entirely with the private history of the church. In fact the election of Pope Pius XI 17 years ago took place in a world much more composed and tranquil than the present one.

It would be a grand thing for everyone if this election could be concerned only with the spiritual life of the great Roman Catholic Church. But, alas, that can not be.

It has been becoming more and more clear since the late Pope's death that the political consequences of this election must be of the greatest importance.

He will remember, however, that the papacy of the past has faced crisis after crisis of a most desperate nature, that it had seemed on many occasions to disappear altogether from human view, and has always returned with renewed strength and vigor.

REAL TASK AHEAD

Over and over again, it has been the papacy that has brought man to reason. It may well be that in the new Pope who is now to be chosen, a personality will appear who will be a great and wonderful factor in the ultimate peace of the world.

The late Pius XI held with marvellous spiritual conviction from first to last that he must defend the spiritual rights of the children of the church, and from whatever quarter they seemed to be attacked he bravely defended them.

One may say at once that whoever his successor may be, he will have no light task in following him. Many names have been discussed, as was inevitable during the last fortnight. There are, for instance, saintly men like the Pope's secretary of state, Cardinal Pacelli, and like Cardinal Dalla Costa of Florence.

Here are two men of whom one might say at once that they will always, whatever may happen, have God's will first in their hearts. Cardinal Pacelli has of course been much identified with the late Pope's opinions and trends of mind.

The late Pope himself frequently asserted that he hoped Cardinal Pacelli would be his successor. This of course has its advantages and its disadvantages with regard to Pacelli's election.

It has always been held that the late Pope's secretary of state is not a likely person for his successor. And this is mainly because, after a long pontificate, many men wish for a new direction of policy. It seemed at first that this would inevitably turn against Cardinal Pacelli's election, but during the last few days, it is understood that the foreign cardinals have been arguing strongly in his favor.

This is of great importance. It perhaps is not generally recognized that although of the 62 cardinals 56 per cent are Italians, only 10 per cent of the whole Catholic Church is of Italian nationality. The foreign cardinals in this conclave represent the world outside Italy, and it is likely that they will impress upon the conclave very forcibly the views of the world on the Roman Catholic Church.

It may possibly be that Cardinal Pacelli because of the support of the foreign cardinals will be elected very early in the conclave, but if the conclave continues beyond two days a situation that has so frequently occurred in other elections may arise.

Two eagerly supported candidates may cancel out one another, and some third cardinals who perhaps until then had not been seriously considered will come to the front as Pius XI himself did at the last election.

International News Photos

FOREIGN PRELATES BACKING PACELLI

bolts and locked the door from the inside.

As the conclave began Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, chamberlain of the Holy Roman Church and former Papal Secretary of State, who is known to be strongly anti-Nazi, stood out as the choice of the foreign cardinals as successor to Pius XI.

FOREIGN BLOC POWER

Among the candidates of the Italian cardinals, Massimo Cardinal Massimi still appeared to enjoy strong support, but unimpeachable Vatican authorities pointed out that the foreign bloc might hold the keys to the election.

Their votes, added to the votes Cardinal Pacelli is certain to receive from Italian Cardinals personally or politically in favor of the policies pursued by the late Pope through Cardinal Pacelli, might be sufficient to bring about the precedent-shattering election of a former Papal Secretary of State. Cardinal Pacelli's candidacy returned to prominence after nearly a fortnight of discreet soundings among themselves by the foreign cardinals.

The previous current in favor of Roderique Cardinal Villeneuve of Canada, and August Cardinal Hlond of Poland appeared to have swung in favor of the confidant of the late Pope who had designated Cardinal Pacelli as his successor in public utterances.

The cardinals embarked upon their holy mission with an impassioned plea for selection of a worthy successor ringing in their ears.

It was delivered by Monsignor Bacci, Vatican secretary of briefs, in the course of his "eligendo pontifice"—instructions for the election of a Pope.

Following a rapid review of the Church's history and of the part it played in crises of the past, Msgr. Bacci said:

"Today, man's desire for worldly possessions prevails over all else. There is contempt for the eternal truths.

"The youth of certain nations is growing up with a contempt for the light of Christianity. There is a return to the errors of old, there is social disorder, hate and dissidence among nations.

"To these ills it is difficult to bring a remedy. Only the precepts of Christian gospel can teach mankind again to tread the path of justice and revive nations by extinguishing hatred and pacifying the souls of men.

"These will be the grave duties of the Pope whom your votes will elect. You see then how he must be and with what wisdom and sanctity he must be provided to face successfully the problems of today and successfully accomplish, with the help of God, His great undertaking."

Msgr. Bacci concluded with a prayer to Pope Pius, invoking his celestial aid for election of his successor.

SALUTED BY GUARDS

The cardinals began to gather early in the day.

As they entered the Vatican they were saluted by the noble guard in the royal hall. They then went to the hall of vestments, where each donned the croccia, or violet wool cape, he will wear throughout the conclave.

Accompanied by their conclavists, a priest and a servant to assist each cardinal, the princes of the church, flanked by Swiss guards, walked to the Pauline Chapel.

At the chapel threshold, other Swiss guards saluted them and the cardinals entered with their suites, the guards remaining outside.

Dozens of candles burned at the altar as the cardinals took their seats. When all the cardinals had arrived the Pauline choir chanted the Veni Creator, or hymn to the Holy Ghost for inspiration.

BALLOT TWICE DAILY

The procedure to be followed in the task of choosing a Pontiff is one that has been laid down by traditions of centuries. Seated on canopied thrones in the Sistin Chapel, the cardinals twice a day will record their choices on ballots consecrated by inscriptions from the holy scriptures.

These ballots will be drawn until a two-thirds majority for one of their number has been attained, at which time a wisp of white smoke issuing from a chimney above the conclave chamber will inform the world that a new Pope has been elected.

John W. Wheelock, gambler slain in Malden ten days ago, left an estate which may total $25,000, attorneys revealed today in filing a petition requesting appointment as administrator of his estate.

Charles E. Cunningham, an attorney with offices on Newbury street, Back Bay, said bank books already located show deposits of $12,000 and indicated the estate may be worth "at least $25,000."

Attorney George A. Travers, an associate of Cunningham, filed the petition in Suffolk Probate Court. Wheelock's address was given as Chester street, Allston. His survivors were listed as Mrs. Ann McGann Wheelock of Oak street, widow, Mrs. Loretta W. Wheelock of Hotel Garde, mother, both of Hartford, Conn.; and John Herbert Wheelock of New York City, his father.

The deceased was listed as an advertising salesman and the exact amount of the estate was given as "uncertain." A bond of $1000 was filed with the petition.

Meanwhile state police said they would present results of their investigation into Malden rackets before the grand jury. They charged witnesses to the murder have hampered their probe with conflicting statements and vague accounts. Several of these witnesses have failed to identify two suspects.

March Breezes in Like a Lamb, But Watch Out!

March arrived like a lamb in Boston today although in the Middle West she was arearing like 20 mountain lions.

So—according to the old saying—it may be a roaring March and a shivery spring in Boston, while the lucky Westerners look for crocuses early.

A cloudy day with continued mild winter temperatures was forecast by Boston's weatherman today. But look out from now on. In March, 1915, more than 33 inches of snow fell in Boston.

Despite heavy rainfall here, there appeared little danger of floods since only light rain fell on the snow-laden mountains of New Hampshire and Vermont.

At Des Moines, Ia., however, plows bit through 15 inches of snow, an all-time February record.

SPEED PROBE OF EL TROLLEY TRAGEDY

5 Groups Sift Cause Of Crash

With him were James G. Ritch and Joseph A. Coppenrath, railway inspectors for the department, and they were to take measurements and question witnesses.

Meanwhile, City Councillor William A. Carey of Roxbury, chairman of the council's committee on public safety, called a meeting of that group for next Tuesday afternoon for an investigation of the crash.

COUNCIL TO JOIN PROBE

Carey forwarded an invitation to Dana and other Elevated officials to attend the committee meeting.

The police end of the inquiry was delayed when Edward F. Hanley, 57, of Blue Hill avenue, operator of the car, was unable to appear in Dorchester court to answer a technical charge of manslaughter.

Hanley, veteran of 22 years in the service and absolved of blame by the Elevated itself, suffered a back injury and is in a state of collapse at his home, the court was told by John J. O'Hare, Jr., the Elevated counsel, who furnished a certificate from Dr. James J. Lynch of Columbia road, Dorchester.

Judge Richard M. Walsh and Captain Thomas E. Duggan of Dudley street station agreed to a continuance until March 15.

PROBE TRAGEDY

At the same time, the Elevated continued a probe of the tragedy. The torn and twisted car was yanned to the Fields Corner station, where experts began a study of the wreck.

With the dead identified after grief stricken scenes at Southern Mortuary, all of the injured save two were released from the City Hospital today.

The two remaining were Nathan Fearlman, 58, of Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester, suffering a brain concussion and a possible fracture of the right leg, and Charles L. Hannon, 52, of Woodrow avenue, Dorchester, under treatment for head lacerations. Doctors said both had good chances of recovery.

The six dead, four of them young girls, were crushed when the car roared across Blue Hill avenue and splintered itself into two large trees.

YOUTH DIES A HERO

Three of the victims were killed in sight of their homes on Blue Hill avenue. They were Eleanor Schriber, 20, a Portia Law School student; Diana Lax, 18, Boston University co-ed, and 12-year-old Dorrit Ruth Freeman of West Newton, who for the past few weeks had been staying in the same house as the other two girls because of scarlet fever in her own home.

George A. Walton, 15, a colored youth, gave up his life to rescue the Freeman child. Seeing her thrown through the street car door, he plunged after her, only to have the car topple over and crush them both.

The other victims were Alexander Kozak, 48, of Angell street, Dorchester, and Alice R. Sloan, 14, colored, of Holworthy street, Roxbury.

The fathers of two of the victims were eyewitnesses to the crash, but were not aware until some time later that their daughters had been killed.

Dr. Jacques Lax, Blue Hill ave. dentist and father of Diana Lax, witnessed the crash from his office window and hurried into the rainswept street to aid rapidly gathering rescue crews. He worked for more than an hour, helping to drag the injured from the wreckage and administering first aid.

Later he learned his own daughter was missing and started the search which led him to the morgue.

Max Schriber, father of Eleanor Schriber, likewise saw the tragedy and felt intuitively that his daughter was dead, but it was not until agonizing hours afterward that he saw her body in the morgue.

NEWS KEPT FROM SISTER

Another daughter, Adelaide, was injured in the crash and news of her sister's death was kept from her last night because of her high-ly nervous condition. The father tried to have her readmitted to City Hospital, so she would not learn of the bereavement immediately, but crowded conditions as a result of the accident precluded this.

Within a few minutes after the crash, a score of ambulances had reached the scene.

Resting at a 45-degree angle, the trolley defied efforts of rescuers to reach the dead for more than a half-hour. Jacks finally raised the car sufficiently for rescuers to glimpse the bodies beneath.

Hysterical parents and relatives thronged the scene and later besieged City Hospital and the morgue, seeking information of their loved ones.

From the mouths of passengers in the car and eyewitnesses in the street came tragic accounts of the sudden disaster.

Israel Diamond, 17, of Fabyan st., Dorchester, a boy crippled by infantile paralysis, revealed the Walton boy's heroism in his account of the accident.

"I was on my way home from the School for Crippled Children. When the car started to go fast I looked out the window and saw a colored boy try to push a little girl out of the path of the car.

"It came too fast for them to get out of the way. The car bore down on them and they disappeared beneath it."

Harry Finkelstein, of Evelyn st., Dorchester, injured in the crash, did yeoman work in aiding other injured. He said:

"We could see the motorman making desperate efforts to stop the car but something must have gone wrong. After the crash seats were thrown over the passengers.

"My brother and I started to pull up the seats to help people who were injured and crying for help. I didn't realize I was hurt but they took me to the hospital and put three stitches in my head."

Paul Feldman, 22, of Dorchester, a passenger in the car, likened it to a "roller coaster on a steep hill, throwing the passengers around, like dice in a box," as it crashed.

"There wasn't any warning or anything like that," he said. "We were going along Seaver st., not going very fast, when suddenly we seemed to start downhill like we were on a roller coaster.

"The car got going awful fast after it jumped the tracks, and men were yelling and women screaming and being flung all over the car like—like you've seen dice rattled around in a dice box.

"Then the next thing we knew the car was over on its side, with a thump, and everyone was piled up on one side.

"There was a woman who had been sitting across the aisle from me. She and I were piled up together. She seemed hurt and dazed.

"I didn't feel so hot myself, and my hand hurt, but I got hold of the woman and boosted her up out of the window that was now the top of the car. Then I climbed out myself.

"Someone shoved me into an ambulance, and I was rushed to City Hospital, where it looked like all the doctors and nurses in the world were gathered. But they took care of me in no time. They were swell."

Breaking out in the truck, the blaze spread rapidly to the car parked beside it. Firemen worked fast to prevent the flames from reaching the garage repair shop and gasoline tanks in a filling station nearby.

Fort Point El Tragedy Killed 45

The tragic trolley car accident which took six lives yesterday was the worst in Elevated history since November 7, 1916, when a surface car plunged through an open drawbridge on Summer street extension and into Fort Point channel. Forty-five persons died.

In recent years, the Elevated has maintained an outstanding safety record, winning the Brady medal for the best travel record in the United States.

Roland Young 'Topper' Again

It's a smart Roland Young who is dressing, role of "Topper" in the film of the Thorne Smith novel. Although he has been dead over four years when "Topper Takes A Trip" gets cast, Smith plays the chosen himself. On the dedication page of the book is the inscription: "For Roland Young."

So casted Young played the title role in last year's "Topper," and comes again in the new sequel, Hal Roach's "Topper Takes A Trip," coming to Loew's State and Orpheum screens tomorrow.

Thorne Smith wanted to see his characters in the picture but the movie moguls were afraid of them.

When Smith presented his book to Young, it was with the regret that the actor would never have the chance to be Mr. Topper on the screen.

It wasn't until three years after Smith's death that Hal Roach executive has natural misgivings and yielded to the knowledge that it was a good story.

Priest He Portrayed Gets Tracy's Award

HOLLYWOOD, March 1 (INS)—Spencer Tracy today admitted he had sent his highly prized award as the best motion picture actor of 1938 to Father Edward J. Flanagan, head of the famous boys' school at Boystown, Neb.

Informed that Bishop Ireland of Boystown visited Father Flanagan and put in the gold statuette known in filmdom as an Oscar, Tracy said:

"Ah, shucks; I didn't say anything about it for fear somebody might think I was doing it for publicity, which I didn't. I meant every word of the inscription."

The award was given Tracy last Thursday by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for his portrayal of Father Flanagan in the picture "Boystown."

The inscription he had put on the statuette read: "To Father Edward J. Flanagan whose great human qualities, kindly sympathy and inspiring courage were strong enough to shine through any human efforts."

Of [illegible] Jesus [illegible] He went to school where the lessons [illegible] and great passages of Scripture were learned by heart and discussed.

We may be sure that while [illegible] was done, He climbed the hills and made friends with [illegible] and saw them lead their flocks [illegible] and found in these rough men a pattern of [illegible] care for the weak as they gathered up the lambs [illegible] and held them gently in their strong arms.

Long afterwards Jesus was to say, "I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine."

And so the pleasant years passed until Jesus, tall and strong, was twelve years old. Then occurred a great miracle which inspired one of Christianity's most beautiful pictures. This, we shall present tomorrow.

TRADE CONCESSIONS to Germany, currently reported in Washington, disturb every American interested in preserving American prosperity for Americans.

If rumors of tariff laws having been eased in favor of the Nazis are true, if the Administration has secretly negotiated agreements that benefit Hitler's subsidized manufacturers, then it is the duty of Congress to begin an IMMEDIATE and THOROUGH investigation.

The Tariff Act of 1930 clearly provides imposition of German exports without countervailing duties.

For the President or any official under him to ignore the Tariff Act or to seek to circumvent it would be an outrageous nullification of the will of Congress.

'MA' JACOBS VETOES BARRYMORE PLAN FOR PLAY

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, March 1—AMBITION: John Barry more confided to a producer last week that he's planning to appear in a Scottish version of Macbeth with the entire cast delivering their lines in Scots dialect. Elaine Barrie and her mother Irene Barrymore fell thus:

Oh no," said Mrs. Jacobs. "That won't happen. You see, I don't think Elaine is ready for Shakespeare yet."

HE SOB: Henri Bernstein, the famous French writer who fought a duel with a critic in Paris last year, allegedly because of an unfavorable review of Bernstein's play, was introduced to Mrs. Alexis Thompson a few days ago. Now you know that Bernstein accused Mrs. Thompson of "acting as if she'd been all over a woman." I don't see why you're surprised. Everyone else I introduce you to, N.

DETERMINATION: Basil Dean, his wife and entourage were said to be terrified from Hollywood recently when during the floods in Los Angeles a man, who had found safety in a tree, noticed a cobra and a python swimming below them. The portly man, in fast upstream, stopped and then turned 12 feet downstream. The python stopped again, moved 12 feet upstream, stopped and then back. "Let's jump in and save that poor man," the boa suggested. "No thanks," the snake-charmer hissed. "He'd only drown us."

You remember Mary Livingstone, Jack Benny's wife? Well, she's appearing in Miami Beach. Her name is Sylvia Cohen. Before marrying Jack she was a model. Jack's comedy writers have been working overtime to find a name for her. Sylvia, Sylvia, Sylvia, they kept saying. Finally, one of them suggested Mary. Mary Livingstone. Jack thought it over. "Mary Livingstone," he said. "Mary Livingstone. I like it. I don't know why I never thought of it before. Mary Livingstone. Yes, that's the name I'll use." Mary Livingstone. Mary Livingstone. Austen Lake:

Will Capital Lean To National Lottery?

AS ONE AMONG SEVERAL MILLION other U. S. citizens who has just shinned off a painful hunk of income to the Federal treasury, and having freshly returned from watching the National squirrel-cage in Washington, I have a suggestion to offer. It is a simple, but not original, suggestion which has the advantage of having been thoroughly tested by one of our sister nations as a sure-fire and bloodless means of frisking money from the people. Maybe it won't keep the government in the style of luxury to which it has become accustomed. But it would help to buy deserving New Dealers some orchids.

AUSTEN LAKE

The suggestion, which is really Senator Robert R. Reynolds' (N. C.) suggestion after all, is to install a mammoth copy of the Irish Sweepstakes in one of the vast Washington mausoleums and make it possible for the U. S. people to buy authentic, colored coupons at $2.50 per foil, of which the government would then skim 40 per cent, according to precedent set in Dublin.

Senator Reynolds was busy wasting the people's time in one of the crystal and gilt cloakrooms just off the Senate well the other day, and in his large voice, was searching for things to think about for publication. It was a full day on the Senate floor with the world's greatest deliberative body beguiling its boredom by clipping finger nail cuticles and reading the comics and playing games of elocutionary leap frog. Senator Reynolds had just finished giving an entertaining travelogue on Wrangel Island, as a means of [illegible]

So he said, "Why gentlemen" with enough vocal impact to knock [illegible] "the chairman a national lottery would gross three billion dollars and for the treasury an annual income of $1,200,000,000 or more that [illegible] WPA."

They Dream Big in Washington

THIS, OF COURSE, IS THE PUREST dream stuff. Because the Irish Sweepstakes, of which we are the largest customer, is surreptitiously sold and its ledgers jealously guarded. The only estimate available of the yearly take at No. 3 O'Connell St., Dublin, is the report made recently to the Dail Eireann, which is a silent partner in the project. The report said that, at the close of business on December 31, 1938, cash on hand, plus expenditures, had reached $81,000,000—or a little more than $20 for the hospitalization of each man, woman and infant in the 26 counties.

There are not quite 3,000,000 in the republic of Eire and the Dail thought that each and every Irishman could not get sick $20 worth. So it cut itself a 25 per cent slice of the gross lest the people get overstuffed with elixirs, pills, lozenges and syrups. They thought that $45,000,000 was sufficient for the health of the Irish.

Senator Reynolds hastened to explain that this Nation is estimated to purchase about $21,000,000 worth o. Irish counterfeits each year. "This does not include approximately one hundred million more spent for phonies," said the Senator, reaching into the treasure of his mind. "Consider then what the revenue would be if the tickets were sold openly and made available not to the few in city centers, but to the rural populations throughout our broad land with central agencies . . ."

★ ★ ★

"Age of Realism . . ."

THE SENATOR DREAMS LARGE WHEN he dreams. For indeed the National Race commission's report shows that only some $600,000,000 was gambled in the eighteen states during the year on the various horse saucers of which the total return to the states was about $16,800,000 at the usual 3½ per cent. This would make more scratch money for the government, or less than the sum sunk in the Passamaquoddy Dam before being abandoned.

Nor was the Senator concerned with the moral aspects of encouraging the good people of this Commonwealth to gamble. "The instinct is inherent in the human breast," he said. "I venchaw to say that the National bootleg gambling bill of the Nation amounts to several billions, of which the government denies itself an honest cut."

A sin, he thought, ceased to be a sin when once made legal and he regarded Nevada, which legalizes all forms of table games, horse and hound gambling, as being more virtuous by being frank about its vices.

"This is an era of realism," funnelled the Senator. "It is time to bury the pruderies of the past. The Nation faces dwindling assets and the need of greater revenue. If it is moral to tax the people 19 cents on every dollar earned, it's moral to give them a gallop for their money."

A part of the gilt moulding on General Jackson's portrait fell as he spoke. The Senator's face was a ruddy mesa, moist with natural oils. He spoke with a habitual churning motion of the mouth.

TO REACH THE SENATOR'S DREAM profit of $10,000,000 a week, 10,000,000 coupons at $2.50 each would have to be sold each week, or one to every 23 men, women and children in the Nation. Nor would that be all clear profit. For the cost of upkeeping the usual bureaucracy, housing, paper work, field operatives, commissions to leg-men, etc., would chew off a hefty chunk from the principal. The Irish Hospitals, Inc., allow themselves a liberal 25 per cent for overhead, which would leave the U. S. treasury $3,750,000 weekly for itself.

That's just peanut money in Washington today!

CRONIN BEGINS SIEGE WITH ADVANCE SQUAD

By HERB FINNEGAN

SARASOTA, Fla., March 1—Well, the baseball season is here, boys, believe it or not.

You'd believe it, all right, if you could have seen those 20 stalwart Red Sox come a trooping and a-whooping out to greet Manager Joe Cronin at Lutz Field this morning.

They looked more like bunch of college boys than professional athletes, especially in the free-swingy uniforms.

Pants down over ankles and where do they dig up those dirty sweatshirts on the first practice day.

"Take it easy boys," cautioned Cronin. "It's a long season."

Take it easy, they did, passing around the specimens called and obliging in pepper games to limber their muscles.

The pitchers, all [illegible] three lefties, down up to Coach Tom Daly and were Mace Berg, Gene Desautels and Johnny Peacock.

GROVE FEELING FIT

Pitchers taking part in the drill were:

Frank Lane, right-hander from Hazelton.

Lefty Grove, for whom the Sox got from Cleveland for Joe Cronin and from whom much is expected.

Ol' Mose Grove himself, who says he never felt better in his life after his season at Hot Springs.

WOODY RICH, who won 19 and lost 10 last year with Little Rock and who throws them up from the port side.

JACK WADE, another portsider who came here from Detroit in the Pete Fox deal.

WILFRED LEFEBVRE, Holy Cross grad from Rochester who pitched a no-hit game for Joe Cronin at Minneapolis a year ago.

FRITZ SMARTENS UP

JACK WILSON, husky [illegible] handed veteran and Sox [illegible] stay.

FRITZ OSTERMUELLER, veteran southpaw who won 13 and lost 5 for the Sox last season and who promised to become a real bad boy but would be rushed to bed [illegible] had been nothing more than a passenger for five years.

All [illegible] up for [illegible] hits with no [illegible] trying to [illegible] anything on the ball.

Then Tom Daly had them chasing long fungoes in the outfield going with rookie outfielders Ceci Metkovich and Sammy Spence, and rookie first baseman Dan Culligan.

Metkovich, like Wade came to the Higgins deal. He's a left handed hitter who clubbed up a .284 mark with the Tigers a year ago in 74 games.

Spence is a chunky lad who bats and throws left handed and who hit for the commendable average of .324 with the Millers a year ago. Culligan hit .325 for Little Rock last year but he is a first baseman. Nuf Ced.

Lefty Grove Mourns Sox Loss of Higgins

SARASOTA, Fla., March 1 (AP)—Lefty Grove laconically reported today that his arm "feels okay now," but shied from predictions and chose instead to lament Pinky Higgins' departure from the Boston Red Sox lineup.

"It's hard for any club to lose the very best third baseman in the league," declared the veteran southpaw pitcher as he started working out with Tom Yawkey's crew.

The hard-hitting Higgins was among several players traded by the Sox in an effort to acquire pitching strength. Rookie Jim Tabor was brought in from the American Association as a replacement.

"It appears possible that young Jim Tabor may be able to do something" at Higgins' hot corner, the 38-year-old Grove continued. "He's got a hard job, though. He has got to do a good job of hitting and fielding."

LOVER AND FIGHTER -:- KID McCOY'S OWN STORY

Kid McCoy and Alice, his fourth wife, are drifting apart. Although he loves her deeply he can not restrain his wayward tendencies.

He leaves Europe for California. Alice joins him in a futile attempt at a reconciliation.

He becomes health editor of a Denver paper, has an act in a circus, establishes a health camp at Palm Beach and becomes so friendly with Isadora Duncan, one of his pupils, that her wealthy backer becomes indignant.

When Alice finally determines to get a divorce, Kid McCoy is heart sick. He enlists for service on the Mexican border, and presently is challenged by a raw-boned heavyweight, who offers to "take it easy" because of McCoy's age, but begins the bout by trying to knockout McCoy. McCoy easily beats the man, and officers stop the bout to save the challenger from further punishment.

While on a 100-mile hike, McCoy's outfit is overtaken at night-fall by a raging sand-storm, imperilling the lives of the exhausted soldiers.

As Told to Lee J. Smits

CHAPTER XXXI

My first moving picture experience was in 1913, after my arrest in London on the charge of robbing a princess of her jewels—which had been taken by her husband to give to his sweetie. As star of "The International Mistake," based on this adventure, but depicting me as a rascal, I received $750 a week for four weeks. The company had a hard time scratching my salary together, but the picture cleared $200,000.

In 1916, Jack McKeon hooked me up with Kenneth Harlan [illegible] making a picture at Yonkers, New York, called "Betty of Greystone," starring Owen Moore and Dorothy Gish. I played a detective with Gish and Ronald Young in "The House of [illegible]." Lasky was [illegible] Cecil's manager, and he took a great interest in boxing and signed me up for a year as his instructor, taking me to California with him.

DETECTIVE IN PICTURES

Again I was a detective in Miss Young's next picture, "Eyes of Youth." I also have the wide brim I had to wear that which was the most important part of my costume as a sleuth.

I was with Lasky for about a year, in a company headed by Robert Warwick, Anita Stewart, Wallie Hawes, and Jack Holt. I especially enjoyed the making of a picture directed by George Melford among the Nez Perce Indians in Idaho.

As a fighter in the movies, I was always scheduled to be the loser. When D. W. Griffith made "Broken Blossoms" I helped him stage the scene in which Donald Crisp and I fought. I became well acquainted with Richard Barthelmess. I worked at Warwick's. The [illegible] and [illegible] another picture.

[illegible] Warwick and Jesse Lasky began a motion picture [illegible] Warwick and I shared living quarters in a house on Wilshire place and Sunset place for about a year. I worked again with Jack Holt and with Rudolph Valentino in the Lasky organization and with Tom Mix, Buck Jones and Lefty Flynn on the Fox lot.

Working with Lefty Flynn on location in Sonora, southern California, on a picture called "Backing [illegible]" I had [illegible] name to a pair of high pressure oil operators in Los Angeles, who [illegible] the [illegible] I began to [illegible] when stock [illegible] my name in the letters and I [illegible] I was [illegible] was a Spanish word came that a [illegible] was [illegible] Los Angeles.

I [illegible] back to the [illegible] the mess at the Mayfair hotel [illegible] Jim Jeffries, former heavyweight champion went my bail, $500, pending a court hearing. The case against me was thrown out of court when the facts were revealed.

WORKED WITH STARS

Marguerite [illegible] was one of the [illegible] I worked [illegible] a [illegible] women and [illegible] of the most beautiful [illegible] I have ever seen.

Goldwyn studio hired me to double for House Peters as the villian [illegible] costume by Rupert Hughes [illegible] Seligman was to hit me with a property chair, so constructed that it would fall apart on the slightest impact. It didn't work quite right, and I was knocked cold and my scalp split.

I worked with Kenneth Harlan and Colleen Moore in Mayer's studio and then with Wanda Hawley at the Paramount.

In 1918 I boxed with Douglas Fairbanks at Lasky's Studio for the benefit of the families of soldiers overseas. Doug hit me in the mouth and knocked me backward, fully clad, into a swimming pool—all prearranged, of course. But that he would knock out two gold teeth wasn't pre-arranged. I had the teeth engraved "From Kid to Doug" and presented them to him.

I boxed with many of the movie notables. D. W. Griffith, while I was giving him a boxing lesson in the Alexandria Hotel, Los Angeles caught me flush on the jaw with his elbow, knocking me down on a hard floor and giving him a terrific scare because I was "out" for some minutes. Jesse Lasky was another of my pupils, and a proficient [illegible].

My last appearance as an actor was in the part of one of the numerous sinners in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments." I helped lug the golden calf and cringed when Theodore Roberts, as Moses, hurled down the marble slab bearing the Ten Commandments.

Outside of "The International Mistake," my only venture as a star was in a two reel comedy called "Kidding Kid McCoy," with Helen Giles. Jack O'Brien, formerly Mary Pickford's director, was our director.

KNEW LIONEL BARRYMORE

Lionel Barrymore came to a gymnasium that Billy Elmer and I had at 110 West Forty-second street and for a month or more Barrymore and I were daily associates. He was frankly studying me, to present the character of Kid Gar[illegible] in the Omar [illegible]

I attended the opening performance and was a little miffed to discover that Kid Garvey was a complete roughneck, using the Bowery idiom, while I always strived to speak good English. Lionel afterward explained that this was a necessary concession to public taste; a refined prizefighter simply wouldn't do on the stage.

In 1921, acting as usual on a sudden impulse, I traveled across the continent to attend the Dempsey-Carpentier fight in Jersey City. It was good to hear again the roar of the crowds, that Jim Corbett used as the title of his life story. Good again to shake the hands of old friends—Tony Biddle, the Philadelphia millionaire-sportsman, who had me sit with him at the ringside and have Carpentier pause on his way to his corner to greet me effusively.

BEATEN

After the fight—and I frankly confess that I enjoyed having my picture taken again by the newspaper camera men—I was put up at the Biltmore by D. F. McSweeny, manager of John McCormack, the Irish tenor.

It was the last taste of the old fame that had been a more potent stimulant to me than wine. In their private car I was the guest of Tommy Meighan and John McCormack, and after leaving New York went to Chicago, met Barney Oldfield, the famous racing driver and a long time friend, and Cliff Durant, son of W. C. Durant, the Michigan automobile magnate.

Cliff took me with him to his lodge on the Au Sable River, near Roscommon, Mich., where we had a delightful time and later engaged me as his boxing instructor on a trip to the Coast, in Oakland, where [illegible] beautiful home, I got to be quite chummy with Professor De Mandill, a gifted musician, who was giving Cliff violin lessons a queer enough combination of tutor.

Kid McCoy in his article in tomorrow's Boston Evening American tells of his ninth marriage.

"The Shadow" Pupil Of Lewis' Style | How Sonnenberg Lost Fortune

"THE SHADOW," the mysterious wrestler who makes his bid for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship when he clashes with Steve Csaey of Ireland at the Garden tomorrow night, is an exponent of the Strangler Lewis school of grappling.

Every move "The Shadow" makes when in the ring reminds one of the famous Strangler.

Asked recently who his wrestling hero was "The Shadow" named Lewis. He also stated that Lewis' headlock is the most effective hold in wrestling.

It has been the headlock that has enabled "The Shadow" to score such a long list of mat victories. The masked wrestler has the skill and power to apply this hold better than any star since Lewis was king of the mat.

It is apparent after watching "The Shadow" wrestle and talking with him that he has been schooled in every trick of wrestling. He is also well educated, and uses the choicest of words in conversation.

There is not any doubt in "The Shadow's" mind that he will be crowned world's champion when he tangles up with the rugged Casey. In the last meeting between "The Shadow" and Casey, the decision was a draw. Both men were exhausted when Referee Sam Smith halted festivities. At the close "The Shadow" and Casey each had a fall to his credit.

There cannot be a draw in tomorrow night's bout. The American Wrestling Association and Paul Bowser have ruled that the contest must go to a decision.

Casey or "The Shadow" will leave the ring a winner by a verdict rendered by the referee.

In order to assure the match being over before the early hours of the morning Paul Bowser has announced that the big fellows will sweep into action at 9 o'clock.

The speculative element is wagering even money on the result of the tussle.

Who do YOU like, "The Shadow" or Casey?

Gus Sonnenberg on Way Back

GUS SONNENBERG, the old Dynamiter of the wrestling wars, was a member of Paul Bowser's party at the Shriner's luncheon at the Parker House. Gus looked the part of the perfect athlete.

"I weigh 208 pounds," said Sonnenberg. "It is more than a year since I have taken a drink, and I do not believe I shall ever take another drink.

"It is great to feel physically fit. I believe I shall regain my old championship.

"I would like to make it clear that I did not toss away the fortune I made wrestling. I had my share of parties, but you don't lose hundreds of thousands of dollars that way.

"I lost my money in poor investments. In most of the cases I trusted my funds to the judgment of people with whom I had gone to college. Things didn't work out right, and I have gone back to wrestling with more spirit than ever. I want to regain my lost title, and also make a new fortune."

Sonnenberg will appear in a special bout on "The Shadow"-Steve Casey card. He will oppose Rebel Bob Russell who has been a pretty tough hombre himself.

I would like to see Sonny win over Russell, and go on to get a crack at the title. I admire these old champions who pick themselves up off the floor and battle for the athletic heights once more.

Random Shots at Target

THE IRISH TEAM has signed for an international amateur boxing show here under the direction of the Irish American A. A. . . . George Freeman is trying to line up an English team to compete in the same tourney . . . Jack Pallat of Cleveland, who clashes with Maurice Strickland in a ten-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Mechanics Building on next Wednesday night, won the title in the heavyweight class at the national amateur boxing championships in this city in 1932.

Major league basketball will be dropped in at the Garden on March 9 . . . The sport has clicked in New York, and Walter Brown is making efforts to put it over here . . . The New York Americans and the Crimson Independents will be the attraction.

Henry Chmielewski will take a rest for two weeks and will then return to the ring wars, according to Harry Kelley . . . Two knockouts over Johnny Rossi inside of eight days gives "Machine Gun" something to talk about.

If War Admiral fails to start in the $50,000 Widener Cup race at Hialeah Park on Saturday, Stagehand will probably go to the post a 4-5 favorite . . . Bookmakers rate Stagehand over War Admiral, but the latter would probably be the people's choice in the mutuels.

N.H.L. Heads Err in Opposing Art Ross on Playoff System

By BILL GRIMES

Apparently, Manager Art Ross of the Bruins knew what he was talking about when he pleaded with the Board of Governors of the N. H. L. last fall in Toronto to limit the playoffs to four clubs.

With three weeks still remaining before the wind up of the regular N. H. L. season, there's a gap of eight points between the fourth place Maple Leafs and the Red Wings of Detroit who are in the fifth slot.

Clubs which have fallen in arrears to the extent of four or more games over a 40-game stretch have absolutely no right to compete for the Stanley Cup.

From the start of the season, it has been very apparent that Canadiens, Detroit and even Chicago, despite the fact that it is the holder of the Stanley Cup, didn't measure up with Bruins, Rangers, Toronto or Americans.

The Bruins and Rangers have been the class of the N. H. L. during this campaign. In 42 starts, the Rossmen have amassed a total of 62 points, winning 30 and tying two games, while Rangers, who have played three less games than Boston, have 51 points. But, then, there's a five-game break between Rangers and Americans, who, in turn, have a two-point edge on Toronto.

LADY LUCK SMILES

Judging from the N. H. L. standings, the schedule makers must have consulted a crystal ball gazer before going into executive session. The Canadiens, who were in last place all season until they beat Rangers in New York on Sunday, have home and home series to play with Chicago and Detroit, which teams are fighting to keep out of the cellar. And, the Black Hawks have one more game to play in Detroit.

The Black Hawks have the hard row to hoe, for they have a home-and-home series with Rangers and single games with Bruins, Toronto and Americans. The Red Wings must tangle with Americans twice along with meeting Boston, Toronto and Rangers, while Canadiens must make another trip to New York for a Ranger game, after they've played Toronto at home tomorrow night and the Hawks in Chicago on Sunday. The Frenchmen will wind up the season here at the Garden.

The crowds in Detroit, Montreal and Chicago will be passable just so long as the three-cornered fight to keep out of last place continues but the Wings, Canadiens and Hawks have ceased being paying attractions on the road, for the fans realize that they are the weak sisters of the Calder organization and are content to wait for the play-offs.

SHADOW, CASEY AWAIT BELL FOR MAT CLASH

The Shadow Visits State House

Both Steve (Crusher) Casey, world champion, and The Shadow, mysterious challenger for the mat title, will have their last strenuous workouts this afternoon for their title bout tomorrow night at the Boston Garden.

If the men followed custom they would have mere tapering off exercises today, but last night they announced that they will work just as vigorously as they have all week and with just as many training partners.

Their decisions probably were prompted by the fact that tomorrow night's battle will be to a positive finish if they have to wrestle all night. Their first engagement went to a draw in almost three hours, but there will be no draw this time, because the match will start at 9 o'clock, a full hour earlier than usual.

Both The Shadow and Casey, as well as Promoter Paul Bowser, have posted $1000 certified checks which will be forfeited to the American Wrestling Association, if a decision is not reached.

Promoter Bowser again visited the men as they worked out yesterday and said last night that they are the "two finest conditioned athletes" he has ever seen.

Eagles Sextet Meets Juniors

With a won to their credit over the big Dartmouth sextet, the Junior Olympics aggregation will cross sticks tonight at the Garden with the wearers of the Maroon and Gold from University Heights, in what promises to be one of the outstanding amateur hockey matches played on Boston ice this season.

This meeting will also serve as a warm-up for the Juniors for their coming struggle for supremacy in the New England A. A. A. U. hockey championships which get under way at the Arena next week.

NATS AFTER YORK; WILL OFFER TRAVIS

By the Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURGH, Fla.—Paul Kirchell's target, which he devised to help the pitchers learn control, and Rookie Charley Keller from Newark are two main points of interest in the New York Yankees' camp. The target won't be tested until the flingers are ready to cut loose, but Keller already has been performing with his big bat and it's reported he can hit a ball farther into left field than any Yankee since Babe Ruth.

ORLANDO—According to rumor, Clark Griffith of the Senators is reopening negotiations for a trade with Detroit. He is after Rudy York or Birdie Tebbetts and offering Cecil Travis as bait. The Senators need right-handed hitting since disposing of Al Simmons and Zeke Bonura.

LAKE CHARLES, La.—Eager for action, the advance squad of the Philadelphia Athletics arrived today for spring training. Lamar Newsome, who joined the group at Opelika, Ala., with Lou Finney, said he was confident of regaining his shortstop post. He was hit on the head on the way north last spring and was out most all season.

PASADENA, Cal.—The new rule which permits pitchers to start their delivery with only one foot on the slab doesn't seem to concern the Chicago White Sox hurlers. Even Bill Dietrich, voluntarily retired last year with a sore arm, didn't know much about the rule, designed to ease the strain on salary flippers, as he propelled a few real curves yesterday.

Bill Dietrich

CLEARWATER, Fla.—Although the Brooklyn squad has been pretty thoroughly overhauled since last season, Manager Leo Durocher still is looking for one more player. What he wants is someone like Pat Crawford, who was so valuable to the Cardinals five years ago. "He could play any position in the infield or outfield," Leo explained, "and what a pinch hitter!"

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—It was Second Baseman Carl Hubbell as the New York Giants chose up sides for a game yesterday, but it still was his throwing arm that counted. The famous sore-armed southpaw had some hard throws to make and his didn't spare his arm a bit. He even helped complete a fast double play.

NEW BRAUNFELS, Tex.—Figuring the Phillies should be well rested after their long train ride, Doc Prothro, their new manager, figures on a quick start. "We'll start with running and bunting games and some fungo hitting and work up from there," Prothro said.

Gabby Hartnett

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—In addition to the eleven pitchers and two catchers on hand to start the St. Louis Browns' training, Joe Glenn, the receiver obtained from the Yankees, is expected here today. He is flying in from Dickson City, Pa.

LAKELAND, Fla.—Manager Del Baker of Detroit already is deep in the task of reforming Chet Laabs' batting style. The young outfielder, who failed to sock last year because the pitchers outguessed him, is being taught to meet the ball, not kill it.

AVALON, Calif.—While Gabby Hartnett of the Cubs is finding it hard to keep Dizzy Dean from bearing down too much, warning him repeatedly against straining the arm he hurt last year, the second squad of infielders and outfielders starts west tonight. They'll be here for a workout Sunday.

Admiral Out of Big $50,000 Cap

By DAVE WILSON

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., March 1—After a conference at noon today with Samuel D. Riddle, Trainer George Conway officially declared War Admiral out of the $50,000 Added Widener Challenge Cup here Saturday.

While the son of Man o' War had recovered from the fever which gripped him Tuesday morning, it was the belief of Owner Riddle and Trainer Conway that the horse's training routine had been interfered with to an extent where he would not be up to his best efforts.

War Admiral didn't work at all this morning which prompted Conway to say that so far as he is concerned the Admiral will not be a started in the $50,000 Added Widener Challenge Cup on Saturday.

The official announcement, however, of War Admiral's declaration from the Florida classic was not to be made until Conway conferred with Samuel D. Riddle, owner of the colt.

The Admiral's temperature subsided to normal early this morning, but he plainly showed the effects of his illness.

Hialeah officials are reported to have asked Riddle to delay in scratching the son of Man o' War until Friday.

De LaSalle Mission's First Foe

Pairings in the New England Catholic interscholastic basketball tournament due to get under way Friday afternoon will find the favorite Mission High School of Roxbury facing its stiffest test of the waning season against De LaSalle Academy, Newport, R. I., in the final game of the night round.

Because of its fine showing over the past five years in Catholic League competition, the Roxbury quintet enters the two-day carnival as the team to beat for the title.

From the sensational squad of last season Coach Driscoll has three boys returning to this year's playoffs. Tom "Cryer" Mulkern, Ivan Kelley and "Wes" Cosby form the backbone of the group that annexed the fourth Catholic League title in the last five years.

WON ELEVEN TITLES

De LaSalle will be making its finest appearance in the five-year history of the tournament but should establish a fine local reputation in its initial start.

Coach Joe Mack's boys have been recognized as Rhode Island Catholic champion since 1924, winning undisputed titles 11 times and sharing that honor the other three years. After dropping Mission from the Eastern last winter, DeLaSalles dropped the finals to St. Peter's of New Bruswick, N. J.

Two boys, Curtis James and Jerry Donovan, both all-star choices in their last tourney, are the only two veterans back on the Newport team.

Pairings pitted Our Lady's high of Newton and Coyle high, Taunton in the series opener to start at 4 p. m. St. Mary's high, Claremont, N. H., and St. Raphael's Academy, Pawtucket, R. I., meet in the completion of the upper half . . . Holy Rosary high, Holyoke, vs. St. Bernard's high, Fitchburg, complete the night session.

FOUR OFFICIALS

Winners in the upper half of the bracketing will meet in the semi-final round Saturday afternoon as will the winners of the lower half . . . Saturday night will find the winning clubs battling for the title with the losers tossing in a consolation tilt.

Four officials have been picked to handle the games, Eddie Boyle and Arthur Gore, Cambridge; Vin Cronin, Somerville, and Louis Hack, Quincy.

LEOMINSTER TEAM IN BOWLING TILT

By WALTER KILEY

To John William White of Newton Center and Gracie Allen of Boston's Crawford House Cafe go the distinction of being first to file their entry blanks for the fourth annual Boston Evening American-Daily Record grand candlepin bowling championships.

Miss Allen (and her name is really "Gracie") and Mr. White will both be on the firing line sometime during the tourney which holds forth in a blaze of strikes and spares from Saturday, March 25th, through Saturday, April 8th.

First team entry received is one from Leominster of five able rollers headed by Burton Stoddard. This quintet comes down to Boston primed to turn in a successful achievement this year to make up for the close title misses of past American-Record tourneys.

Among the other early birds are John Giuffre, Charlestown; Richmond Eliason, Stoughton; James Paul Lord, Roxbury; Pat Lospennato, Revere; Francis Broughton, Marlboro; John Cassidy, Watertown; John Barker, Cambridge, and Ralph Floyd, Beacon Chambers, Boston.

These are the vanguard of a legion of male and female contestants who will pack Huntington Club's 66 grand alleys from one end of the tourney to the other.

EXPERT CAPACITY ENTRY

Jack Stafford, manager of the famous Huntington Club, states that he has never found more sincere interest in the tourney as he has during the past two weeks.

He is content to estimate that last year's history making tourney entry list of more than 6000 bowlers will easily be beaten before the lists are closed for good and all.

These fine alleys are groomed to perfection for the mammoth pin congress. They're resplendent with bright new polish and true as the most expert pin artisan could desire.

Every single bowler in New England, young or old, expert or novice, is not only welcome but cordially invited to participate. The official entry blank appears daily in the American and Record. This blank gives about all the necessary information as to rules and regulations.

It shows how the competition is divided into classes for amateurs and so-called "Open" rollers, the latter constituting those who are employed in bowling alleys or ranked high for past outstanding accomplishments in the sport.

WATCHES FOR "PURES"

The amateurs will be handsomely rewarded with Gruen Precision wrist watches, 11 grand timepieces, donated by Gruen Watch Company of Time Hill, Cincinnati. There will be other prizes running into heavy money.

Open contestants will roll for cash prizes only, every cent of entrance money being returned in coin of the realm.

In the meanwhile, with time growing short, we urge one and all to get busy. Mail your entry blank, that of your doubles partner and team, even that of your whole league outfit if you have it ready, to Jack Stafford, at the Huntington Club, Boston, and do it TODAY.

Huskies Defeat New Hampshire Team

Northeastern University moved into fourth place in the New England College Hockey League with a 5-4 victory over New Hampshire at the Arena.

With only two minutes to play, Johnny Chipman of Arlington fired a disc at the N. H. cage that put the Huskies on top and into fourth position.

Simmons Finds Range At B's Camp

By JOE CASHMAN

BRADENTON, Fla., March 1—Al Simmons, the man of many uniforms, showed the effects of his training session at Hot Springs in the first workout the Bees had today. The former Washington slugger, now wearing the livery of Bob Quinn's hired help, sure had his batting eye today.

He golfed three long drives that carried well over 350 feet, which caused the strategy board of the locals to raise their eyebrows. Simmons is usually a slow starter. Like all veterans he works himself into shape gradually. But this year Al has made up his mind to be in tip top shape when the open bell rings.

Last year, playing with Washington, he looked pathetic at Fenway Park in the Nats first visit. He went into a slump that didn't respond to "treatment" until late in the season.

To avoid a repetition of such an occurance this year, Al set sail for the "Springs" two weeks before the call to arms and if his hitting today is any criterion, the Bees are certain to start the veteran in the outfield hoping that his heavy "punch" will get them off to a fast start.

Freddie Frankhouse, veteran pitcher, was the first casualty of the season. He was hit on the ankle by a drive from the bat of Johnny Hill and though it only amounted to a bruise, was given the remainder of the day off.

Among the standouts aspiring to fill vacancies are Joe "Lefty" Sullivan from Toronto, who won 18 and 10 last season, and who picked up quite a bit of experience two years ago with the Tigers.

Tom Earley from Roxbury, via Hartford, who twirled one very excellent game near the finish of the last campaign; Al Moran, Al Hazel, Art Doll, John Fezzullo, who hurled 26 wins for Savannah, and an old friend, Fred Frankhouse, acquired from Brooklyn.

Ross, Smythe System Proves Unpopular — Babe Seibert Picks Bruins to Win Cup

Since the opening of the hockey season, Art Ross and Connie Smythe have been ardent propagandists for the referee-lineman system of officiating now in vogue in the N. H. L.

Neither Ross nor Smythe have fumbled an opportunity to praise the merits of the new system.

But, with all due respect to Ross and Smythe as orators, there's still any number of non-believers among the N. H. L. managers, players and the public.

Along with the other governors who were responsible for the new system, Ross and Smythe might have had one eye on the profit and loss account when they voted to take such a drastic and untried step.

Art Ross

Under the two-referee system the N. H. L. put thousands and thousands of dollars of its "take" back into circulation. Traveling expenses for officials were on a par, if not in excess, of salaries paid to the referees. Under the new system, linesmen are home town products, have no traveling expenses and received but $25.00 per game.

The minor leagues refused to fall in line when approached to adopt the referee-linesman system. And the amateur and college organizations also turned a cold shoulder on the innovation.

Walter A. Brown, general manager of the Garden, whose hockey background is more extensive, because of the years that he spent abroad managing amateur clubs, which played in most of the European countries, than most of the N. H. L. executives, believes that the only solution is the adoption of a system where the referee-in-chief is off the ice, preferably at a vantage point above the playing surface.

Tommy Filmore, who played for the Bruins a few years ago and is now with the Springfield Indians, is perfecting a system whereby the official will be above the ice, equipped with electrical device that would enable him to press light keys, which would signal any and all decisions.

In the Filmore system, caged-in electric lights would be installed at certain locations along the boards and in the corners of the arena. The referee would be the only judge of play. He would call all rule infringements. The official on the ice would do nothing other than face the puck at spots indicated by the referee over the public address system.

Frank Jones, Boston College football and track trainer, who handled the old Tigers and the B. A. A. some years ago, is pinch hitting for Win Green . . . "Jonesey" is an experienced trainer but it will require a little time for him to learn the ropes.

Babe Siebert didn't get into the game until the second period . . . He has been handicapped by a lame back and has been used very sparingly for a couple of weeks . . . Claude Bourque, the French goal minder, met his uncle, Bill King, of Dorchester, yesterday for the first time in ten years.

During the second period, a rail spectator was knocked cold by a puck, which was deflected over the fence . . . Jackie Keating and Doggie Kuhn of the Rhode Island Reds, were the guests of "Toe" Blake . . . When "Toe" played in Providence he roomed in the same apartment house as Keating and Kuhn . . . But for the past two seasons the Reds have been on the road every time the Canadiens played in the Garden.

Bill Summerhill almost separated Woody Dumart's upper lip from his nose when he hooked the Bruin's stick while racing for the puck . . . Woody was very lucky . . . He was not cut . . . Eddie Shore tried to get Frankie Brimsek to truck down the ice to the Boston cage when they came into the arena for the start of the third period . . . But it was "no dice."

When Manager Jules Dugal recalled Claude Bourque from Kansas City to replace Willie Cude the rookie goalie flew 2000 miles to get to Montreal . . . He was routed from K. C. to Chicago, Pittsburgh, Newark and then up to Montreal . . . Bun Cook, manager-coach of the Rhode Island Reds, sat behind the Bruins' bench.

Bill Cowley picked up three points last night . . . The Bruins will not practice until Friday afternoon . . . Babe Siebert declared after the game that if the Bruins don't win the Stanley Cup there should be an investigation.

The Army hockey squad will invade Kingston, Ont., this week-end for its annual climax match with the Royal Military College of Canada.

The United States West Pointers have never beaten the Canadian "West Pointers," despite the fact that they have engaged them in 15 ice battles.

The annual West Point-Royal Military College games are most unique. When they arrive in Kingston, Ont., Saturday the Kaydets will be met by the scarlet coated members of the Canadian team. They will pair off immediately goalie with goalie, center with center and so on down to the last substitute, to become inseparable for the entire visit. Each host takes his guest to his own room and provides sleeping quarters. They will go to meals together, march in ranks together and together they'll attend classes.
